Meet four powerhouse devoted to helping others overcome their share of challenges.

Susan Burton

A New Way of Life

Project

I N P R E S S E L L I M I T E D

VP, Operations

A few days before the launch of The Beauty of Giving, Susan Burton was in Los Angeles. "With 25 years of experience in 10 states, I’ve seen all kinds of women and all kinds of challenges," she said. Burton is a former inmate who was sentenced to 27 years in prison. She founded the nonprofit organization in 2006. "Women are often judged by their worst moment," she said. "We give women a second chance to live a life they never knew was possible."

Moonlyn Tsai and Yin Chang

Harbor House

A NEW NORMAL CITY Street in Santa Monica, where women have been staying for more than 20 years, is a place of hope. Women have found a sense of community in this place, and they have built a strong foundation to help them succeed. "We provide a space for women to come together and support each other," said Chang, the executive director. "The women at Harbor House are like a team. We work together to help each other through the tough times."

When the president calls Covid 'King No,' it gives people permission to target our community.

JILL DONALDSON

When I left prison for the sixth time, I thought, How am I going to make it?

SUSAN BURTON

The Future of Gratitude

"Finding Gratitude" is a book and career development program that helps people find their purpose and connect with their values. "We help people find their purpose and connect with their values," said Burton. "We help them find their purpose and connect with their values."